Rising Gulf Investments in Africa: A New Era of Strategic Partnership

In recent years, Africa and the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries have entered a new phase of economic cooperation. This development positions Africa as an emerging centre for international investment. According to Afreximbank, the continent has a GDP of around USD 3.1 trillion and is projected to grow annually by 4 – 5 percent, increasing its share of the global economy. The youthful demographic profile, along with extensive mineral deposits and significant agricultural potential, creates a supportive environment for sustainable growth and development.
